

13 of the Campiest Looks at the Met Gala Next to the Great Works of Art That (Probably) Inspired Them

From Janelle Monae as a Man Ray to Harry Styles's pearl earring, here are the most artistic fashions from the gala.

Caroline Goldstein & Noor Brara, May 7, 2019

The flamingo-pink carpet was awash with feathers, tulle, sequins, gold lamé, and plastic baubles—perfectly fitting for the Metropolitan Museum of Art's high-glamour annual Costume Institute gala, this year dedicated to the theme of camp fashion.

Tracee Ellis Ross

Tracee Ellis Ross arrives for the 2019 Met Gala. Photo by Karwai Tang/Getty Images. Right: Lorraine O'Grady's "Art Is..." performance, 1983.

Actress Tracee Ellis Ross's gold picture frame seemed to reference Lorraine O'Grady's 1983 performance Art Is..., in which the artist and critic framed the faces of black and Latino people at that year's African American Day parade.