Jesse Helms should not stop by the Stux Gallery at 155 Spring Street, where directors Stefan and Linda Stux have mounted a show of the work of artist Cary Leibowitz. Entitled "Candy Ass," the show includes paintings and collages with just the kind of homoerotica that the conservative Senator from North Carolina abhors.

Stux is also the gallery that represents Andres Serrano, the artist who, with the late Robert Mapplethorpe, is at the heart of the censorship controversy.

The show runs through Sept. 30.
